When Cathy Priestner-Allinger stood on the podium in Innsbruck, Austria as the 1976 Olympic Silver medalist in Speed Skating, she never dreamed that one day she would be the first woman to head the sports function at an Olympic Games, let alone in her native Country.

An Olympian, former coach, administrator, volunteer and television broadcaster who has been involved in every aspect of sport and sport management, Priestner-Allinger is no stranger to breaking records. It's a feat she hopes to repeat in her role at VANOC, where her scope of responsibility includes sport, venue management, medical services, anti doping control, Paralympic Games and the actual running of the Olympic Games' 82 medal events.

As the lead author of the "Own the Podium 2010" report, Priestner Allinger is integrally involved in the $110 million initiative, which is designed to provide Canadian Athletes with resources and technology they need to succeed and make it to the podium in 2010.

Cathy joins us this November to connect communities such as yours to the Olympics and Paralympics as the Country engages the honour of hosting 2010 Winter Games.
